Have it,

Your Way

We don't just serve burgers — we serve bold, flame-grilled flavor that puts you in charge. As the "Home of the Whopper," we pride ourselves on delivering real ingredients, real fire, and real satisfaction.

Burger King and the Whopper

Burger King started in 1954 in Miami, Florida, when James McLamore and David Edgerton opened their first restaurant. Their flame-grilled burgers quickly made the chain popular, and today Burger King has locations all over the world.

The Burger King website documentation outlines the project's structure and development process for creating a responsive site using HTML and CSS. Key points include:

1. **Overall Layout Structure**:

- Centered container layout with a fixed width of 960px.
- Background features a linear gradient in brand colors.
- Divided into Header, Navigation, Banner, Content, and Footer.

2. **Header and Navigation**:

- Logo centered at the top, with a horizontal navigation menu.
- Links include Home, Menu, Rewards, Check Out, and Our Location.
- Navigation adapts from horizontal to vertical on smaller screens via media queries.

•

3. **Banner and Content Section**:

- Large banner image (960px wide) with a two-column content layout.
- Aside section (400px) for images and an article section (540px) for text.

•

4. **Footer Section**:

- Also 960px wide, divided into left (image) and right (promotional text) sections using float positioning.

•

5. **Responsive Design**:

- Media queries adjust layout for screens smaller than 600px.
- Navigation changes to vertical, images resize, container width becomes auto, and elements stack vertically for mobile usability.

*Conclusion*: The project showcases skills in structured layout design, CSS styling, and responsive web development, ensuring visual consistency across different screen sizes.
